PREFACE.

The eighth volume of the Naumkeag Directory, is a complete directory of the cities of Salem and Beverly, and the towns of Danvers, Marblehead, Peabody, Hamilton, Wenham, Middleton and Topsfield, nine places in all.

It contains over thirteen hundred pages, is the largest book of the kind ever issued for this district, and excels nearly all similar publications in accuracy and completeness of detail.

A careful examination of its various departments will give some idea of the labor involved in its production, but will not fully impress one with the great amount of care and detail essential thereto. The index to contents on pages 20 and 21 shows to some extent the diversified information contained herein.

Notwithstanding the depression in business circles, the patrons of the Naumkeag have increased in number, and have shown by their generous support, that the effort of the publisher to furnish a directory second to no other in the Commonwealth, is highly valued.

An examination of the census table on page 151, shows that the population of Salem and adjoining places, has materially increased during the ten years ending in 1895, Salem having gained 6383, Beverly 2620, Danvers 1120, Marblehead 154, and Peabody 977, or a total gain of 11,254 for the five places. The total population of the same places in 1895 was 72,638, and the same ratio of increase in the next as during the past ten years, will give a population in 1905 of 85,000, and in ten years later (1915) of 100,000 people. Although other places in the Commonwealth may have increased more rapidly this community is certainly to be congratulated upon its substantial growth during the past decade, and its adaptability for manufacturing and residential purposes, its well graded and lighted streets and good water supplies, ought to prove beneficial in promoting the growth expected.

Nearly all the old features of the directory have been retained in the present edition, and many new ones will be found. The historical events which formerly appeared in the front of the book have been separated, and the events of each place located with the city or town to which the same relates.

With this edition a Salem Directory and a Suburban Directory have been issued, the price being $2 each or $4 for both, while the price of the Naumkeag Directory which combines both the others in one volume has been increased from $2 to $3.

HENRY M. MEEK, Publisher.

SALEM NICKNAMES.

(From the Salem News.)

Salem is unusually prolific in local nomenclature. There is hardly a lane or alley, hill or hollow, which has not borne some nickname more or less appropriate at some period of its history. In this age of directories such names become lost, giving place to the recognized title.

All down town, below Pleasant street, was formerly known as Wapping, so named from Wapping in London.

North Salem was christened Pigeonville, and many still call it North Fields, a later title.

Castletonville, now nicknamed Nauvoo, was a locality where Winthrop and Endicott streets now are. A man named Joe Smith built a house there about the same time that Joe Smith, the Mormon, settled Nauvoo.

Roast meat hill applied to the rising ground back of High street.

Knocker's hole was in the vicinity of Mill and Margin streets. There was a shipyard there in the last century.

Button hole was near the jail, and the Button hole toughs used to have fights with the Knocker's hole gang.

Vinegar hill was on Broad street
Circus lane is now Hathorne street, the fields out that way being let years ago for circus performances.

Liberty hill is in North Salem, off Appleton street. There was a little picnic ground there years ago and quite a story could be written of its history.

Buffum's corner was at the junction of Boston and Essex streets, named after a Buffum who kept store there about 150 years ago.

Neck gate denoted the end of Derby street.

Blubber hollow was from Federal to Goodhue street, also known as Town bridge.

Johnny Cake hill stood between Blubber hollow and the big tree on Boston street.

Carletonville is a section of North Salem on Mason street.

From the big tree to the Peabody burying ground was called Trask's plain.

The Nubble was a locality near the Peabody burying ground.

Goose lane ran from Federal to Fowler street.

Lovers' lane was off Tremont street.
Plank alley was a part of Elm street between Charter and Essex.

Baptist hill, in the rear of Federal street, named from the First Baptist church, now called Odell square. They used to baptize in a pond near by.

Gallows hill, in the rear of Boston street, the scene of the witchcraft executions of 1692 is too well known to require anything beyond mere mention. As also the town pastures and Castle hill, which still hold their names.

Creek street is so named because it is built over what was a creek, but is now culverted over.

School house lane was the early name given Washington street, afterwards Court street.

"Nahum Keike," or Naumkeag, was the original Indian name for North river.

Federal street was so named in 1766, as an indication of the united feeling in favor of something better than an eight-foot way along the North River. The portion from Washington to North was previously called Marlborough street, and the eastern portion County street.

Old Paved street was the name of Essex between Washington and North for many years, it being paved about 1773. King street and Main street are also names which have been applied to Essex street.
